good will of the people of this community, which has been ours since that day,

We have tried to deserve this good will by conservative investment methods and by never forgetting that the money which is deposited with us is held in trust for thousands of depositors-large and small-who are relying on us to keep their money safely for them.

We are now safeguarding the interests of more than 8,000 depositors. May

On the balance sheet of the Woolworth Company the item of "Good Will" is valued at $50,000,000. This may seem like a large valuation of an intangible asset and yet no business can make a notable success without the good will of that part of the public which is particularly interested in that line of business.

Here in the Montpelier Savings Bank and Trust Company we are proud of the nearly fifty years ago, when we opened our doors for business.

"Old Ephraim" Buck Probably Still

Ranging Woods if Not Dead of Old Age Additional deer reported to Game Warden Charles Stafford are as fol-lows: Charles Bedell of Waterbury, 125-pound buck; Frank Peterson, 115bound buck; W. A. Allen, Essex, 125doe; Garrow Martin, 75 pound buck; Fred Perry, 125-pound doe; Kenneth Bull, 202½-pound (dressed) eight-point buck; B. C. Bull, seven-point buck; Cletus Tomlinson, 115-pound buck; Wilfred Hoisington, 100ound doe. It was thought that the buck secured by Kenneth Bull might be "Old Ephraim," a large and wary old buck which has successfully eluded his hunters for many seasons, but the game warden estimates that Old Ephraim would weigh 450 pounds and carries many more points on his horns and he is probably still ranging the Worcester mountains if he has not died of old age.

"All right," replied the proprietor "we'll start counting this barrel of tacks," and he hauled forth from under the counter a hogshead of shoe tacks. "And when we get them counted," he continued, "there are four more barrels in the rear." The Norwell man, when he had recovered his speech, requested release from the bargain, as he readily deduced that he would be counting tacks for the next three months. Furthermore h wouldn't be able to cash up, if h owned the entire town of Norwell. The dealer told the anxious would be customer that he ought to get $10 for breaking the contract, but seeing he was a game sport he would call the all deal off and let it go at that. The Norwell resident admits it is the first time he ever got stuck on a deal. One-cent sales are supposed to be popular, but not the kind that was put on.—Rock
